TROOP ROSTER - PULASKI COUNTY

There is no way to find out the exact number of men from Pulaski County who served in the Union and Confederate armies. Many enlisted in large groups and was issued into the same company. This group is identifiable due to the location of enlistment and muster in. Many others joined itinerant units of both armies and were not mustered in anywhere near Somerset or Pulaski County. These groups of Pulaskians scattered throughout the two armies.

During the early months of the war, many boys from Pulaski County traveled to Ohio or Indiana and joined the Union Army in Units identified with those States. This group, except in rare instances, is almost impossible to identify as to residence. The same is true of individuals who drifted to Tennessee and Western Kentucky to join Confederate units.

Nearly all of the Fifth Kentucky Volunteer Infantries (Union) were from Kentucky and most of Company "H" were from the Pulaski County area. The Fifth was organized and mustered into service at Camp Joe Holt, Indiana, in the summer of 1861. It was one of the First Kentucky Regiments to volunteer for Union service and later formed the nucleus of the Army of the Cumberland.

The Nineteenth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry (Union) was organized at Harrodsburg in the fall of 1861. They marched to Somerset in January 1862 and were engaged, for several months, in destroying the entrenchments of Zollicoffer at Mill Springs. Many Pulaskians joined this Regiment, but never mustered in, as the Regiment left the vicinity.

The listing given is of troops that were mustered in at camps in Pulaski County, or can by identified from muster in rolls, as largely coming from Pulaski and surrounding counties.

PATTERSON'S COMPANY OF MECHANICS AND ENGINEERS (UNION)

Patterson's Company of Mechanics and Engineers was organized in Somerset, Kentucky, under Captain W. F. Patterson.

This company was employed, as enlisted, in the construction of defenses for Camp Hoskins until December 2, 1861. When Brigadier General Schoepf assumed command, they continued the work defense near Somerset until the Battle of Mill Springs. On January 16, this company, with seven other companies from the command, repaired the road from Somerset to Stanford. On April 20, the company reported to General George W. Morgan at Cumberland Ford. Until September 18, the unit was engaged in building and repairing roads in the Cumberland Gap area. In December, they ordered the unit to Memphis, where it embarked with the division for the attack upon Vicksburg. From December 26 to January 1, the unit was constantly engaged in building earthworks and bridges in the Vicksburg area. The company was constantly on filial duty, until the return to Kentucky on November 23, 1864.

FIRST KENTUCKY CAVALRY
(UNION)

COMPANY "L"

All original members of Company "L", First Kentucky Cavalry were natives of Pulaski County. A few from other sections may have been recruited during the various campaigns but the company's personnel, both commissioned and enlisted, remained almost totally natives of the county from beginning to end. They were young, unsophisticated men who were but remotely aware of the secluded and vindictive causes that generated the war but were sharply aware that the Union was in danger of being dismembered. The only remaining evidence of their service are the numerous military headstones that dot Pulaski County's various burial sites—and a Union that remains intact.

The unit was organized at Somerset, Kentucky, September 11, 1861, mustered into service at Camp Dick Robinson on October 28, 1861, and mustered out of service at Camp Nelson, Kentucky on December 31,1864. The First Kentucky Cavalry suffered the second highest aggregate death count of all Kentucky troops (348), surpassed only by the Ninth Infantry (355).

SECOND KENTUCKY VOLUNTEER CAVALRY
(UNION)
COMPANY "F"

The Second Regiment Kentucky Volunteer Cavalry was organized at Camp Joe Holt and mustered into service of the United States on September 9, 1861. The regiment became part of the Army of the Cumberland and was before General Buell's Army at Shiloh. In September of 1862 they returned to Kentucky in pursuit of Confederate General Bragg. The regiment marched from Perryville, as far as Mount Vernon where they abandoned the pursuit and both armies tried to reach Nashville first. From Nashville the regiment marched to Murfreesboro and in the battle at Stone River received special mention from General Rousseau. The regiment participated in battles at Shiloh, Perryville, Stone River, Chickamauga, Lookout Mountain, and all the battles of the Atlanta Campaign.

Company "F" was composed of men that were primarily from Pulaski and surrounding counties.

TWELFTH REGIMENT KENTUCKY INFANTRY
(UNION)

The Twelfth Kentucky Volunteer Infantry was organized in October of 1861 at Camp Clio, Pulaski County, Kentucky, under Colonel W. A. Hoskins. They were mustered into the service of the United Stated on January 30, 1862, by Captain J. M. Kellog, Mustering Officer. The officers of this command failed to furnish a history of the operations and marches of the regiment; therefore, giving an accurate statement concerning the part taken by this regiment is impossible. After serving the three years of its organized enlistment, it veteranized. It was engaged in the battles of Stone River, Chickamauga, Corinth, and all the battles of the Atlanta campaign.

THIRTIETH KENTUCKY VOLUNTEER MOUNTED INFANTRY
(UNION)

The Thirtieth Kentucky Mounted Infantry organized under the 20,000 call, as authorized by Congress, and mustered into the United States service for one year. Companies "A," "B," "E," and "F's" were mustered in at Frankfort, Kentucky on February 19, 1864 and Company "G" on March 29, 1864. Companies "C," "D," "H," "I," and "K" were mustered in at Camp Burnside, Kentucky, April 05, 1864.

These were difficulties attending the organization of this regiment, owing to the constant presence of guerrillas and small raiding parties. This made it exceedingly dangerous for the recruiting officers to leave any records relating to company engagements.
